SCULPTURE WORKSHOP

This year marks 100 Years of Yukon Aviation.

How can we conceivably imagine what it was like to encounter those first aircraft appearing over the horizon a century ago?

We invite you to explore the wonder of flight and the myriad strangeness of the 2020 Covid-19 situation through a solitary sculpture creation workshop. This workshop has been devised by the Yukon Transportation Museum, Nicole Bauberger, and Heather Von Steinhagen to be delivered to you without face to face interaction, without Zoom!, and in a geographically interesting area.

You will leave from the starting point without knowledge of what to expect, other than knowing you are expected to complete a sculpture with provided and found items over the next several hours. Early in your hike you will receive direction from a surprising encounter from the sky.

Spots for this workshop are limited.

Yes, I am eligible and would like to receive the honourarium.¹

I have an open mind and am expecting something unusual.

I am able to walk up to three kilometres on uneven ground.

I agree to dress for inclement weather (rain-sun, hot-cold)

I agree to be filmed and I understand this footage may be used for promotional purposes or in a short film.

I am available:

_____ August 14th 10am-2pm (or) _____ August 15th 10am-2pm

Workshop is only one day - mark both if you are available for both and note your preference (1-2)

Participants rejoin at 5pm to view the created artworks of the day.

I agree for the display of my work at the Yukon Transportation Museum through to August 2021 or longer. Note if you would like your piece returned after the exhibit has completed.
